“Wonderful baked goods” make Pascal Rigo’s “casual” Presidio Heights “favorite” “especially good for breakfast”; the New French “bistro-lite” fare served at lunch is “decent” but “mostly just convenient” – provided, that is, you “make it through the jam of Bugaboos to get in”, then withstand the “chaotic” “cafeteria-style service” amid “kids’ howls” (which the “play area” may or may not allay); it’s “more calm at dinner time”, but “horrid” uncomfortable chairs nevertheless cry for “takeout.”
